CONGRESS.

Thursday. SENATE—Washington's birthday was appropriately observed.

HOUSE—The day was spent in an effort to seeme a quorum to consider the Bland seigniorage bill.

Friday. House—Mr. Bland in the most scathing terms denounced the members of the New York delegation who had been opposing his silver seigniorage bill. He called them anarchists and almost every other mean name he could think of, much to the astonishment of the other members and the crowd in the galleries.

AOUSE-Nothing done. No quorum.

Monday. SENATE-Nothing of general interest, Adjourned at 1:20.

House—The Hatch anti-options bill was referred to the agricultural committee.

The squabble over the Bland bill resumed.

Tuesday. SENATE — Many petitions protesting against certain provisions of the Wilson bill were read.

HOUSE—Still no quorum.

The senator seems goes into slots." Just where this sort of to be in a safer boat. On Wednesday worse than unimportant bills will lead | the question came up in the house to adus remains to be seen. First the house journ over till the following Monday in passed the skunk bill and the senate honor of Washington's birthday and bekilled it; then the popgun bill passed the cause neither house was doing anything house and the senate has hung that up in of much importance, anyhow. The memcommittee; then the senate passed the ber referred to made a very long plea quail bill and the house killed that; the ferret bill came over to the house from the senate and that is hung up in com- duty, and the stale old demagogue chestmittee. Thus far these foolish propositions have not obtained places upon the opposition to adjourn. The house didn't statute books. The present assembly has had more frivolous bills introduced thus far than the Seventieth had during its whole existence. In important work at Snyder Bros. Saw Mill. Cedar shingles the Seventy-first assembly has done absolutely nothing. The only important taxation bill-that to tax sleepingcar companies upon their mileage-was taken from the railroads and telegraph committee by its author and sent to the committee on taxation and there it remains. A semi-official report is to the the house was demanded in each branch, effect that this committee will give an unfavorable report if it gives any at all. both these great reformers were absent. Biennial ses- the senate Thursday before it adjourned. sions are, at the present writing, still un- It was the first time he had been absent dermined in the senate and the tie-up on the school appropriation bill has compelled the state treasury to fly light for a fortnight or more. The situation in the treasury comes about from a peculiar state of affairs that is worth explaining. The house, after it had passed the biennial sessions resolution, made the school does. It never pays to play the demaappropriations for two years all in one gogue all the time, for once in a while bill. This appropriation for school pur-anyhow, as the amount could be figured out for more than two years ahead as well as it could for one. The senate refused to pass the bill in the shape in which it came from the house, but amended it to a one-year bill. The house refused to concur in this proposition because it had already passod the biennial session resolution, and the senate refused to recede because it had not passed the biennial resolution. The bill was thus thrown into a conference committee, and neither side would give in. It was then determined to wait as long as possible to determined to wait as long as possible to see what the senate would do with bien-

The balances only are paid over either way. Inasmuch as the time for settlements is at hand the state can not make advance drafts pending settlement. Paydays have been suspended all over the statehouse, including the legislature, and the state treasurer has been down lower than $10,000 at times. The state is nearly ready to suspend payment with plenty of money due it and much of what is due it tied up in special deposit packages inside its own vaults, yet it can not be touched. Locking horns on the biennial session matter is about the only important question that has yet been attempted by either house, with the exception of the passage of the emergency board repeal bill, which the house assed in its adolescent days and which the senate finance committee is holding within the sacred recess of its pigeon hole. The Control of the State Institutions has of late years agitated the reformers. Last year a bi-partisan board bill for the asylums of the state, now called state hospitals, was defeated in the house. This plan has reappeared this winter in a new form, though the bill embodying its features has not yet been introduced. This plan provides for the non-partisan bill for the state hospitals and for a state board made up of one man from each of the local boards. This state board will have the power to oversee the hospitals in various parts of the state, provide for uniform bookkeeping, see that the best methods of management and government shall be used in all of the institutions and in many other ways exercise a salutary influence upon the various state hospitals. Another plan is to have a state board composed of four men to manage all of the state institutions, and thus do away with the local boards. The members of this board would have to put in all of their time and would get $4,000 a year salary. The salary feature of this will kill such a proposition, in the present house at least. There has already been introduced in the senate a bill on this same subject which has much merit. The measure proposes to divide the state institutions up into several classes. The first class is to comprise all the state hospitals, including the one for epileptics at Gallipolis. The second class will take in the institutions for the deaf and dumb, for the blind and for the feeble minded youth. The Lancaster reform school for boys, the Delaware school for girls and the new reformatory at Mansfield will make up a third, while the penitentiary, which is an institution of from the rest, except in some respects the third class, will be in a class by itself. A board of five members is to be in charge of each class and they are to I. Humphrey. much business magnitude and different serve, except for the postentiary, withis to get the institutions of the state that are alike upon the same footing as to methods, business management and reports. The state institutions, except the penitentiary, have the reputation the country over of being the best managed of any in the country, and this under the old plan. It would seem that the proposers of new plans would have to make their arguments pretty strong to overcome the situation. It is hard to show that a new plan will be better than the old when the old is the best in results of any similar exper ments.

They Forgot. A senator and a representative were caught last Thursday, Washington's against adjournment. He believed in the legislature remaining at its post of nuts were trotted out in support of his agree with him, however, but passed the resolution, but the senate had to concur before the resolution was of any effect. When it was read in the senate a senatornoted for his prompt and regular attendance, gave notice to discuss, thus sending the resolution over until next I was also troubled with dyspepsia, and it was day, which was the same as killing the adjournment proposition. The next day both senator and member were absent from their respective posts. A call of and the record shows very plainly that from the senate for as much as half an hour since the legislature convened. The member who made a show of himself had left town the night before; he had gone away with the calm assurance that the record showed that he had voted to stay at work, and he never once thought that the record might also show that he had played hookey, but that's what it one is apt to be caught. Quail. The bill passed by the house to pro-hibit the sale of quail at any time during the year and to prohibit the possession of quail except in the open season has been defeated in the senate. Thus the pot hunter's glory is not yet passed away. He can still go out in the early morning armed with a club and a double-barreled shotgun; he can still sneak up on a covey of quail and blaze away, both barrels at once, before the birds can take to wing, He can do all this because the state of Onio still provides a market for his plun-der. The effort to take away that maropened.

Those Jewels Again. nial sessions. The state auditor is thus unable to make settlements with the various counties for 'their December tax collections. Many of them have already come to the state treasury with large will be introduced in the house by the time this reaches the eye of the reader. The partial was passed 11 days before the similar bill was last year, and the date for the introduction of the general bill for the current year will be a day or two earlier than last; besides, the second year's bill will be introduced at the same time and the deficiency bill within a day or two, which will be earlier than the deficiency bill of last year, so that on the whole the financial legislation is better in hand than was to have been expected the first time that biennial sessions were attempted.

An attempt will be made to hold but one session of the house each day, begin-ning at 12:30 or 1 o'clock in the afternoon. If at 12:30, the time actually at command would be exactly as long as now, but the time is now broken in two and a long recess is taken at noon. Under the proposed plan committees could meet in the mornings instead of in the evenings, when the members are all tired out. This is an important point, as the work of the committees is of greater consequence oftentimes than is the work reason for the change is in that the cal before the day's proceedings begin, so that it is impossible for members to look up the bills that will be before them early in the day for consideration. Under the new plan those who haven't committee meetings would have an opportunity of looking these bills up. This would have a wonderfully good effect on legislation. Thus members would do the bulk of their committee work when they are best prepared to do it; the calen-dar could be obtained two or three hours day's work would not be broken in two as is now the case. There is strong probability of the new plan being tried. A MEMBER OF THE HOUSE.
